SUCCESSFUL COMPLETION OF THE GREEN PATH PROGRAM LEADS TO ADMISSION TO DEGREE STUDIES

PART ONE: 12-Week University of Toronto Summer Academic Preparation Program

1. The 12-week summer Academic Preparation Program is an academic preparation program with the objective of improving the student’s overall English comprehension and communication skills for academic purposes and preparing students for the transition to succeed at the University of Toronto. A “high-standard” of performance and conduct is expected of all students. Students are required to arrive to class on time, attend all classes and special sessions and work hard as if they were preparing for their Gaokao examinations. All students in the Green Path program are required to speak English at all times during academic and structured activities. (e.g. field trips, special events)
2. Classes begin on May 31st, 2021. All students must arrive between May 25th and 27st, 2021. Students who cannot arrive within this time must write to the University stating the reason, and indicate new arrival date and obtain written approval by the University in advance. Failure to arrive by May 27th, 2021 may result in cancellation of enrollment to the Green Path program. Students must submit their Canadian Study Permit application to the Canadian Embassy or Consulates in China at the earliest possible, preferably no later than February 15th, 2021.
3. Completion of a 0.5 credit University of Toronto course: “Exploring Inter-Cultural Perspectives in Academic Contexts” (Course code “CLTA02H3”). This course develops students' academic and communication skills through a critical exploration of Canadian culture and academic expectations. Students will learn through interactive online and in-class collaborative discussions and develop their multi-literate engagement in English.
4. Academic performance reports are issued to students during the Green Path program. Parents who wish to know their child’s progress should contact their child. It is the student’s responsibility to report their academic performance to their parents. The University reserves the right to contact parents if behavioral or academic problems arise. Behavioral problems may include: repeated absences, lateness, non-compliance to University policies, disrespecting any member of university staff, faculty members and community. Any form of misconduct according to University of Toronto standards, policies, and regulations will result in disciplinary action. In extreme cases, a student may be required to leave the Green Path program and return home at his/her own expense. In that case, Green Path program fees are not refundable.

5. Supporting student success and helping students achieve their fullest potential is one of the University's key goals. Students are expected to behave in a responsible manner as adults. The University offers a wide array of support services to assist students to reach their fullest potential. The University aims to assist students academically, socially and personally. Ultimately, it is up to the student to take responsibility for their actions and to make full use of available resources. At the University of Toronto Scarborough campus, there is a vibrant life outside the classroom and a strong sense of community. It is easy to share common interests with fellow students by joining student clubs and attend social events. Have fun, make new friends and enrich the student university experience.
6. For the duration of the Green Path program, the University administrators must obtain a copy of your valid UHIP (University Health Insurance Plan) card on file. The administrators will use this card ONLY in the event of medical emergency and ONLY for your benefit. However, the student should understand that he/she is still required to register for UHIP and activate it upon arrival.
7. At the end of the Green Path program, the student will take an English Proficiency Test and will receive a final academic performance report. To pass the Green Path program, students must achieve a final grade of at least "B".
8. Students who fail to meet the English Proficiency standard of the Green Path program, (e.g. do not receive a final grade of "B") will face one of the following consequences:

The offer of Admission may be withdrawn by the University of Toronto and admission and further registration may be refused. There will be no refund of fees paid for the Green Path program.

In some circumstances if the university considers it appropriate the student may be permitted one more term (September to December) to satisfy the English language proficiency required for admission. The student will be expected to enroll in further full-time non-credit English as a Second Language (ESL) classes offered by the university during the fall term at the student's own expense. Students who achieve a final grade of at least B in the fall ESL program will be permitted to begin credit classes in January. Those who do not will have their offer of admission withdrawn and will be required to leave the university.

In some other circumstances if the university considers it appropriate the student may be permitted two more terms (September to December and January to April) to satisfy the English language proficiency requirement. The student will be expected to enroll in further part-time non-credit English as a Second Language (ESL) classes offered by the university during the fall and winter terms at the student's own expense. During this time the student will also be permitted to enroll in a limited number of credit courses (maximum of 1.5 credits per term). These students will then be subject to the standard rules regarding Determination of Academic Status outlined in the U of T Scarborough Calendar (Section 7.6), with the addition that they must satisfy the English language proficiency requirement by the end of the winter term (May); failure to do so will also result in the withdrawal of an offer of admission, regardless of credits completed.
