Description:

This D-level seminar will explore how early modern people thought about and practiced community, belief, and ritual, and situate these thoughts and practices within the context of early imperialism and colonialism. We will look at religious conversion in relation to other social processes, and examine whether the “globalization of Christianity” is a useful paradigm through which to understand the experiences of missionaries and converts in different parts of the world in the period 1500-1800. Throughout the semester, we will ask to what extent religious conversion was a tool of empire, and what other kinds of power relations were at work in the production of converted subjects.

Goals:

- To learn about early modern religious conversion in Europe, Asia, and the Americas;
- To explore the various approaches historians have taken to the study of early modern religious conversion and empire;
- To develop analytical reading and writing skills;
- To plan and carry out independent research.

As a senior-year research seminar, this course aims to provide you with the skills you need in order to develop and carry out an independent research project in history, including critical reading of secondary literature, compiling an annotated bibliography, developing an original argument using evidence from primary documents, and writing a research statement, an outline, and, eventually, a research paper.

Requirements:

Full attendance and active participation in class discussions, careful reading of all assigned texts, two in-class presentations, and timely submission of all assignments, including weekly one-page response papers.

Evaluation:

Participation and attendance	10%
Response papers	10%
First oral presentation	5%
Book review	10%
Second oral presentation	10%
Annotated bibliography	10%
Proposal and outline	10%
Final research paper	35%
<hr/> Total:	100%

Readings: All required readings will be available on the intranet at least a week in advance. You should print out your own copies and have them with you for class.

Response papers: Every week, you should post a short (1 page max) response to the weekly readings on the course website by 10am on Wednesday (i.e. 24 hours before class) to allow everyone to read each other's responses. Your response should not be a summary of the readings but rather a set of questions or comments that will serve as the basis for class discussion.

In-class presentations: Based on a schedule to be determined at the beginning of the semester, you will be in charge of presenting a set of readings and leading class discussion. Your presentation should consist of a 5-minute introduction (situate the author, summarize the argument, clarify key terms and concepts), followed by some themes for discussion based on your classmates' response papers (you need not submit a response paper yourself on the readings you present). You will then be in charge of leading discussion for 20-30 minutes. Your task in leading discussion is to make sure it addresses the issues brought up in the response papers and any other issues you think are important. You should try to make the discussion inclusive, productive, and respectful of everyone's ideas.

Assignments: As a rule, and to keep things fair, there will be no extensions on deadlines. All assignments are clearly indicated on the course outline and are due before the following Tuesday at 10am. Assignments should be submitted electronically through the intranet. Be prepared for computer outages and glitches—I will not accept late submissions due to any technical problems. To protect your own privacy I cannot accept hard copies of your assignments.

Office hours & email etiquette: It is vital that you come to my office hours several times during the semester (Tuesdays 1pm-3pm @ H324 and by special appointment) to introduce yourself, to discuss your research interests, and the progress of your research project. If you need to contact me outside office hours, it's best to use email (I do not check my office voicemail). I also expect you to email me in advance if you must miss class due to medical/family emergency. Do understand that I cannot always respond promptly to your queries. Responsibility for making up materials covered in missed classes lies with you.

Writing: The University offers a great range of services to help improve your writing skills. I strongly encourage you to visit the Writing Centre (AC 210) and/or the English Language Development website at <http://www.utsc.utoronto.ca/%7Etlsw/ELD>.

For excellent advice on writing, including tips on reading, summarizing, citing sources, and how not to plagiarize, check out <http://www.utoronto.ca/writing/advise.html>. If ever in doubt about plagiarism, please consult me or the excellent staff at the Writing Centre before submitting your assignments.

For a primer on research, check out the Research Basics page at: <http://www.utsc.utoronto.ca/-libweb/ResearchBasics.htm>

AccessAbility: Students with diverse learning styles and needs are welcome in this course. In particular, if you have a disability/health consideration that may require accommodations, please feel free to approach me and/or the AccessAbility Services Office as soon as possible. The UTSC AccessAbility Services staff (located in S302) are available by appointment to assess specific needs, provide referrals and arrange appropriate accommodations (416) 287-7560 or ability@utsc.utoronto.ca. The sooner you let us know your needs the quicker we can assist you in achieving your learning goals in this course.
